Thousands Have Been Helped
By Common Sense
Suggestions.

Women suffering from any form of female ills are invited to communicate promptly with the woman's private correspondence department of the Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Co., Lynn, Mass. Your letter will be opened, read and answered by a woman and held in strict confidence. A woman can freely talk of her private illness to a woman; this has been established a confidential correspondence which has extended over many years and which has never been broken. Never have they published a testimonial or used a letter without the written consent of the writer, and never has the Company allowed these confidential letters to get out of their possession, as the hundreds of thousands of them in their files will attest.

Out of the vast volume of experience which they have to draw from, it is more than possible that they possess the very knowledge needed in your case. Nothing is asked in return except your good will, and their advice has helped thousands. Surely any woman, rich or poor, should be glad to take advantage of this generous offer of assistance. Address: Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Co., (confidential) Lynn, Mass.

Every woman ought to have Lydia E. Pinkham's 80-page Text Book. It is not a book for general distribution, as it is too expensive. It is free and only obtainable by mail. Write for it today.

CHAPTER XVII.

Mrs. Chedsoye Has Doubts.

Mrs. Chedsoye retired to her room early that memorable December night. Her brother could wait the return of Horace. She hadn't the least doubt as to the result; a green young man pitted against a seasoned veteran's duplicity. She wished Jones no harm physically; in fact, she had put down the law against it. Still, much depended upon chance. But for all her confidence of the outcome, a quality of restlessness pervaded her. She tried to analyze it, ineffectually at first. Perhaps she did not look deep enough; perhaps she did not care thoroughly to examine the source of it. Insistently, however, it recurred; and by repeated assaults it at length conquered her. It was the child.

Did she possess, after all, a latent sense of motherhood, and was it stirring to establish itself? She really did not know. Was it not fear and doubt rather than motherly instinct? She paused in front of the mirror, but the glass solved only externals. She could not see her soul there in the reflection; she saw only the abundant gifts of nature, splendid, double-handed, prodigious. And in contemplating that reflection, she forgot for a space what she was seeking. But that child! From whom did she inherit her peculiar ideas of life? From some Puritan ancestor of her father's; certainly not from her side. She had never bothered her head about Fortune, save to house and clothe her, till the past forty-eight hours. And now it was too late to pick up the thread she had cast aside as not worth considering. To no one is given perfect wisdom; and she recognized the flaw in hers that had led her to ignore the mental attitude of the girl. She had not even made a friend of her; a mistake, a bit of stupidity absolutely foreign to her usual keenness. The child lacked little of being beautiful, and in three or four years she would be, Mrs. Chedsoye was without jealousy; she accepted beauty in all things unreservedly. Possessing as she did an incomparable beauty of her own, she could well afford to be generous. Perhaps the true cause of this disturbance lay in the knowledge that there was one thing her daughter had inherited from her directly, almost identically; indeed, of this pattern the younger possessed the wider margin of the two: courage. Mrs. Chedsoye was afraid of nothing except wrinkles, and Fortune was too young to know this fear. So then, the mother slowly began to comprehend the spirit which had given life to this singular perturbation. Fortune had declared that she would run away; and she had the courage to carry out the threat.

Resolutely Mrs. Chedsoye rang for her maid Celeste. Thoughts like these only served to disturb the marble smoothness of her forehead.

The two began to pack. That is to say, Celeste began; Mrs. Chedsoye generally took charge of these maneuvers from the heights, as became the officer in command. Bending was likely to enlarge the vein in the neck; and all those beautiful gowns would not be worth a solid without the added perfection of her lineless throat and neck. She was getting along in years, too, a fact which was assuming the proportions of a cross; and more and more she must husband those lingering (not to say beguiling) evidences of youthfulness.

"We might as well get Fortune's things out of the way, too, Celeste."

"Yes, Madame."

"And bring my chocolate at half after eight in the morning. It is quite possible that we shall sail tomorrow night from Port Said. If not from there, from Alexandria. It all depends upon the booking, which can not be very heavy going west this time of year."

"As Madame knows," came from the depth of the cavernous trunk. Celeste was no longer surprised; at least she never evinced this emotion. For twelve years now she had gone from one end of the globe to the other, upon the shortest notice. While surprise was lost to her or under such control as to render it negligible, she still shivered with pleasurable excitement at the thought of entering a port. Madame was so clever, so transcendently clever! If she, Celeste, had not been loyal, she might have retired long ago, and owned a shop of her own in the busy Rue de Rivoli. But that would have meant a humdrum existence; and besides, she would have grown fat, which, of the seven horrors confronting woman, so Madame said, was first in number.

"Be very careful how you handle that blue ball-gown."

"Oh, Madame!" reproachfully. "It is the silver braid. Do not press the rosettes too harshly."

Celeste looked up. Mrs. Chedsoye answered her inquiring gaze with a thin smile.

"You are wonderful, Madame!"

"And so are you, Celeste, in your way."

At ten o'clock Mrs. Chedsoye was ready for her pillow. She slept fitfully; awoke at eleven and again at twelve. After that she knew nothing more till the maid roused her with the cup of chocolate. She sat up and slipped slowly. Celeste waited at the bedside with the tray. Her admiration for her mistress never waned. Mrs. Chedsoye was just as beautiful in dishabille as in a ball-gown. She drained the cup, and as she turned to replace it upon the tray, dropped it with a clatter, a startled cry coming from her lips.

"Madame?"

"Fortune's bed!"

It had not been slept in. The steamer-cloak lay across the counterpane exactly where Celeste herself had laid it the night before. Mrs. Chedsoye sprang out of her bed and ran barefoot to the other. Fortune had not been in the room since dinner-time.

"Celeste, dress me as quickly as possible. Hurry! Something has happened to Fortune."

Never, in all her years of service, could she recollect such a toilet as Madame made that morning. And never before had she shown such concern over her daughter. It was amazing!

"The little fool! The little fool!" Mrs. Chedsoye repeatedly murmured as the nimble fingers of the maid flew over her. "The silly little fool; and at a time like this!" Not that remorse of any kind stirred Mrs. Chedsoye's conscience; she was simply extremely annoyed.

She hastened out into the corridor and knocked at the door of her brother's room. No answer. She flew down-stairs, and there she saw him coming in from the street. He greeted her cheerily.

"It's all right, Kate; plenty of room on the Ludwig. We shall take the afternoon train for Port Said. She sails at dawn to-morrow instead of to-night."

"What's up?" suddenly noticing his sister's face.

"Fortune did not return to her room last night."

"What? Where do you suppose the little fool went, then?"

They both seemed to look upon Fortune as a little fool.

"Yesterday she threatened to run away."

"Run away? Kate, be sensible. How the deuce could she run away? She hasn't a penny. It takes money to go anywhere over here. She has probably found some girl friend, and has spent the night with her. We'll soon find out where she is."

The Major wasn't worried.

"Have you seen Horace?" with discernible anxiety.

"No. I didn't wait up for him. He's sleeping off a night of it. You know his falling."

"Find out if he is in his room. Go to the porter's bureau and inquire for both him and Jones."

The Major, perceiving that his sister was genuinely alarmed, rushed over to the bureau. No, neither Mr. Ryne nor Mr. Jones had been in the hotel since yesterday. Would the porter send some one up to the rooms of those gentlemen to make sure? Certainly. No; there was no one in the rooms. The Major was now himself perturbed. He went back to Mrs. Chedsoye.

"Kate, neither has been in his room since yesterday. If you want my opinion, it is this: Huddy has sequestered Jones all right, and is somewhere in town, sleeping off the effects of a night of it."

"He has run away with Fortune!" she cried. Her expression was tragic. She couldn't have told whether it was due to her daughter's disappearance or to Horace's defection. "Did he not threaten?"

"Sh! not so loud, Kate." "The little simpleton defied me yesterday, and declared she would leave me."

"Oh!" The Major fingered his imperial. "That puts a new face to the subject. But Jones! He has not turned up. We can not move till we find out what has become of him. I know. I'll jump into a carriage and see if he got as far as the English-Bar."

Mrs. Chedsoye did not go up-stairs, but paced the lounge-room, lithe and pantherish. Frequently she paused, as if examining the patterns in the huge carpets. She entered the reception-room, came back, wandered off into the hall-room, stopped to inspect the announcement hanging upon the bulletin-board, returned to the windows and watched the feluccas sail past as the great bridge opened; and during all these aimless occupations but a single thought busied her mind: what could a man like Horace see in a girl like Fortune?

It was an hour and a half before the Major put in an appearance. He was out of breath and temper.

"Come up to the room." Once there, he sat down and bade her do likewise.

"There's the devil to pay. You heard Huddy speak of the nigger who guarded the Holy Ylfordes, and that he wanted to get out of Cairo before he turned up? Well, he turned up. He fooled Huddy to the top of his bent. So far as I could learn, Fortune and Huddy and Jones are all in the same boat, kidnapped by the Mahomed, and carried out into the desert, headed. God knows where! Now, don't get excited. Take it easy. Luck is with us, for Huddy left all the diagrams with me. We need him, but not so much that we can't go on without him. You see, these Arabs are like the Hindus; touch anything that concerns their religion, and they'll have your hair off. How Fortune got into it I can't imagine, unless Mahomed saw her with Huddy and jumped to the conclusion that they were lovers. All this Mahomed wants is the rug; and he is going to hold them till he gets it. No use notifying the police. No one would know where to find him. None of them will come to actual harm. Anyhow, the coast is clear. Kate, there's a big thing in front. No nerves. We've got to go to-day. Time is everything. Our butler and first man cabled this morning that they had just started in, and that everything was running like clock-work. We'll get into New York in time for the coup. Remember, I was against the whole business at the start, but now I'm going to see it off."

Feverishly Mrs. Chedsoye prepared for the journey. She was irritable to Celeste, who was unbearable to her brother, who took a seat in a forward compartment to be rid of her. It was only when they went aboard the steamer that night that she became reconciled to the inevitable. At any rate, the presence of Jones would counteract any influence Horace might have gained over Fortune. That the three of them might suffer unheard-of miseries never formed thought in her mind. It appealed to her in the sense of a comedy which annoyed rather than amused her.

They were greeted effusively by Wallace, he of the bulbous nose; and his first inquiry was of Ryne. Briefly the Major told him what had happened and added his fears. Wallace was greatly cast down. Huddy had so set his heart upon this venture that it was a shame to proceed without him. He had warned him at the beginning about that infernal rug; but Huddy was always set in his careerish schemes. So long as the Major had the plans, he supposed that they could turn the trick without Huddy's assistance; only, it seemed rather hard for him not to be in the sport.

"He told me that nothing would give him greater pleasure than to stick his fist in the first bag of yellow-boys. There was something mysterious in the way he used to chuckle over the thing when I first sprung it on him. He saw a joke somewhere. Let's go into the smoke-room for a peg. It won't hurt either of us. And that poor little girl! It's a hell of a world, eh?"

The Major admitted that it was; but he did not add that Fortune's welfare or ill-fare was of little or no concern of his. The little spitefire had always openly despised him. They were drinking silently and morosely, when Mrs. Chedsoye, pale and anxious, appeared in the companionway. She beckoned them to follow her down to her cabin. Had Fortune arrived? Had Ryne? She did not answer. Arriving at her cabin she pushed the two wondering men inside, and pointed at the floor. A large steamer-roll lay untrapped, spread out.

"I only just opened it," she said. "I never thought of looking into it at Cairo. Here, it looked so bulky that I was curious."

"Why, it's that damned Ylfordes!" exclaimed the Major wrathfully. "What the devil is it doing in Fortune's steamer-roll?"

"That is what I should like to know. If they have been kidnapped in order to recover the rug, whatever will become of them?" And Mrs. Chedsoye touched the rug with her foot, absently. She was repeating in her mind that childish appeal: "You don't know how loyal I should have been!"

They took the first sailing out of Naples. Twelve days later they landed at the foot of Fourteenth Street. There was some trifling difficulty over the rug. It had been declared; but as Mrs. Chedsoye and her brother always declared foreign residence, there was a question as to whether it was dutiable or not. Being a copy, it was not an original work of art, therefore, not exempt, and so

North and so on. It was finally decided that Mrs. Chedsoye must pay a duty. The Major paid grudgingly, very cleverly assuming an irritability well known to the inspectors. The way the United States government maltreated her citizens for the benefit of the few was a scandal of the nation. A smooth-faced young man approached them from out the crowd.

"Is this Major Callahan?"

"Yes. This must be Mr. Reynolds, the agent?"

"Yes. Everything is ready for your occupancy. Your butler and first man have everything ship-shape. I could have turned over to you Mr. Jones."

"Not at all, not at all," said the Major. "They would have been strangers to us and we to them. Our own servants are best."

"You must be very good friends of my client?"

"I have known him for years," said Mrs. Chedsoye sweetly. "It was at his own suggestion that we take the house over for the month. He really insisted that we should pay him nothing; but, of course, such an arrangement could not be thought of. Oh, good-by, Mr. Wallace," tolerantly. "We hope to see you again some day."

Wallace, taking up his role once

"You See, Mr. Jones, I've Found a Fine Rug to Us to Bring Home for Him."

more, tipped his hat and rushed away for one of his favorite haunts.

"Boulder!" growled the Major. "Well, well, a ship's deck is always Liberty-Hall."

"You have turned your belongings over to an expressman?" asked the agent. These were charming people; and any doubts he might have entertained were dissipated. And why should he have any doubts? Jones was an eccentric young chap, anyhow. An explanatory letter (written by the Major in Jones' careless hand), backed up by a cable, was enough authority for any reasonable man.

"Everything is out of the way," said the Major.

"Then, if you wish, I can take you right up to the house in my car. Your butler said that he would have lunch ready when you arrived."

"Very kind of you. How noisy New York is! You can take our hand-luggage?"

"Mrs. Chedsoye would have made St. Anthony uneasy of mind; Reynolds, young alive, metaphorically fell at her feet."

"Plenty of room for that."

"I am glad of it. You see, Mr. Jones, I've found a fine old rug to us to bring home for him; and I shouldn't want anything to happen to it."

The Major looked up at the roof of the dingy shed. He did not care to have Reynolds note the flicker of admiration in his eyes. The cleverest woman of them all! The positive touch to the whole daredevil affair! And he would not have thought of it had he lived to be a thousand. "One might as well disembark in a stable," he said aloud. "Ah! We are ready to go, then?"

They entered the limousine and went off buzzing and zigzagging among the lumbering trucks. The agent drove the car himself.

"Where is Jones now?" he asked the Major, who sat at his left.

"Haven't had a line from him for a month."

"Just before we sailed," said Mrs. Chedsoye through the window, over the Major's shoulder, "he went into the desert for a fortnight or so; with a caravan. He had heard of some fabulous carpet."

Touch number two. The Major grinned. "Jones is one of the best judges I have ever met. He was off at a bound. I only hope he will get back before we leave for California." The Major drew up his collar. It was a cold, blustery day.

The agent was delighted. What luck a fellow like Jones had! To wander all over creation and to meet charming people! And when they invited him to remain for luncheon, the victory was complete.

Mrs. Chedsoye strolled in and out of the beautifully appointed rooms. Never had she seen more excellent taste. Not too much; everything perfectly placed, one object nicely balanced against another. Here was a rare bit of Capo di Monte, there a piece of Savres or Canton. Some houses, with their treasures, look like museums, but this one did not. The owner had not gone mad over one subject; here was a sane and prudent collector. The great yellow Chinese carpet represented a fortune; she knew enough about carpets to realize this fact. Ivories, jades, lapis-lazuli, the precious woods, priceless French and Japanese tapestries, some fine paintings and bronzes; the rooms were full of unspoken romance and adventure; echoed with war and tragedy, too. And Fortune might have married a man like this one. A possibility occurred to her, and the ghost of a smile moderated the interest in her face. They might be upon the desert for weeks. Who knew what might not happen to two such romantic simpletons?

The butler and the first man (who was also the cook) were impeccable types of servants; so thought Reynolds. They moved silently and anticipated each want. Reynolds determined that very afternoon to drop a line to Jones and compliment him upon his good taste in the selection of his friends. A subsequent press of office work, however, drove the determination out of his mind.

The instant his car carried him out of sight, a strange scene was enacted. The butler and the first man seized the Major by the arms, and the three executed a pas-soul. Mrs. Chedsoye eyed these manifestations of joy stonily.

"Now then, what's been done?" asked the Major, pulling down his cuffs and shaking the wrinkles from his sleeves.

"Half done!" cried the butler.

"Fine! What do you do with the refuse?"

"Cart it away in an automobile every night, after the gun starts down the other end of the street."

"Gun?" The Major did not quite understand.

"Gun or bull; that's the argot for policeman."

"Thieves' argot," said Mrs. Chedsoye contemptuously.

The butler laughed. He knew Glenda of old.

"Where's that wall-safe?" the Major wanted to know.

"Behind that sketch by Detaille."

And the butler, strange to say, pronounced it Detli.

"Can you open it?"

"Tried, but failed. Wallace is the man for that."

"He'll be along in an hour or so."

"Where's Ryne?"

"Don't know; don't care." The Major sketched the predicament of their fellow-conspirator.

The butler whistled, but callously. One more or less didn't matter in such an enterprise.

When Wallace arrived he applied his talent and acquired science to the wall-safe, and finally swung outward the little steel door. The Major pushed him aside and thrust a hand into the metal cavity, drawing out an exquisite Indian casket of rosewood and mother-of-pearl. He opened the lid and dipped a hand within. Emeralds, deep and light and shaded, cut and uncut and engraved, flawed and almost perfect. He raised a handful and let them tinkle back into the casket. One hundred in all, beauties, every one of them, and many famous.

And while he toyed with them, pleased as a child would have been over a handful of marbles, Mrs. Chedsoye spread out the ancient Ylfordes in the library. She stood upon the central pattern, musing. Her mood was not one which she had called into being; not often did she become retrospective; the past to her was always like a page in a book, once finished, turned down. Her elbow in one palm, her chin in the other, she stared without seeing. It was this house, this home, it was each sign of riches without luxury or ostentation, where money expressed itself by taste and simplicity; a home such as she had always wanted. And why, with all her beauty and intellect, why had she not come into possession? She knew. Love that gives had never been hers; hers had been the love that receives, self-love. She had battered her body once for riches and had been fooled, and she never could do it again. . . . And the child was overflowing with the love that gives. She couldn't understand. The child was the essence of it; and she, her mother, had always laughed at her.

The flurry of snow outside in the court she saw not. Her fancy reformed the pretty garden at Mentone, inclosed by pink-washed walls. Many a morning from her window she had watched Fortune among the flowers, going from one to the other, like a bee or a butterfly. She had watched her grow, too, with that same detachment a machinist feels as he puts together the invention of another man. Would she ever see her again? Her shoulders moved ever so little. Probably not. She had blundered wilfully. She should have waited, thrown the two together, maneuvered. And she had permitted this adventure to obsess her! She might have stood with in this house by right of law, motherhood, marriage. Ryne was in love with Fortune, and Jones by this time might be. The desert was a terribly lonely place.

She wished it might be Jones. And immediately retrospection died away from her gaze and actualities resumed their functions. The wish was not without a phase of humor, formed as it was upon this magic carpet; but it nowise disturbed the gravity of her expression.

$100 REWARD, $100

The readers of this paper will be pleased to learn that there is at least one dreaded disease that science has been able to cure in all its stages and that is Catarrh of the Bladder. This is the only reliable cure now known to the medical profession, the cure being a constitutional disease. It is not a local ailment, and Dr. Williams' Pink Pills are taken internally, acting directly upon the blood and mucous surface of the system, thereby restoring the system to its normal state, and giving the patient strength by building up the constitution and assimilating the food taken.

Proprietors have much faith in this curative power, that they offer one hundred dollars for any case that it fails to cure. Write for list of testimonials. Address:

Newark 24. Mansfield 20.
The last team of Newark High won the basketball contest last evening from Mansfield High in the latter city by a score of 24 to 20. The game from start to finish was a hot one and full of spirit, and many difficult baskets were made by the Newark lads. All the boys from here held their own and the ginger that our boys put into the game is what won the contest.

Training school report for the year ending January 31, 1913:
Number of courses in training Jan. 31, 1912, 8. Seniors 4, Juniors 4. Total 8.
Probationers accepted, 8; number leaving during probation, 5; number of nurses leaving, 2; number of nurses dismissed, 1; remaining in school, 3 (nurses); number of probationers, 1.
A class of five nurses was graduated June 23, 1912. Seventeen classes in anatomy and physiology have been held by Dr. Homer J. Davis; 23 classes in practical nursing by the Superintendent, besides demonstrations by Miss Bell; 12 lectures have been given by the members of the staff.
The general health of the nurses has been good, no serious illness having developed.
We wish to express our thanks to the members of the staff who have given of their time to lecture to the nurses, also for medical attendance.
We also wish to express our thanks to the Board for their interest and help.

M. W. OF A. TABERNACLE MEETING.
All Modern Woodmen and Royal Neighbors who desire to attend the Rev. Sunday meeting for the Modern Woodmen at Columbus on the evening of February 12 are requested to call at the M. W. of A. office Tuesday, February 11, and secure a badge and admission ticket. The Woodmen and Royal Neighbors will meet at the entrance of the Union Station at 6 p. m. to attend the tabernacle meeting in a body.

Denison 71. Miami 14.
Denison ran away last night with Miami, 71 to 14. The Denison aggregation started things with a rush, and after a few moments of play the outcome was very evident. The passing of the home team was a feature of the contest, it thoroughly dazzling the opponents.
Black, Biggs and Jones tossed goals at will, the work of Biggs being most noticeable. Black got away with 11 goals, while Jones captured eight. Pruden showed up best for Miami, tossing three field goals. Denison plays Notre Dame Monday evening and an exciting contest is expected.

Hints on Hair Health

If you use our treatment, we will show you your hair from falling or pay for the treatment ourselves.
Dandruff is a contagious disease caused by a microbe which if not removed causes baldness. This microbe often comes from a comb or brush belonging to someone else.
If you are troubled with dandruff, itching scalp, falling hair or baldness, use the famous "93" Hair Tonic. This will do more than anything else to remove the dandruff, destroy the germ, make the scalp healthy and stop falling hair. If there is any life left in the hair, it also promotes growth of new hair.
We believe that probably 65 per cent of the cases of baldness could be overcome if people would only use Rexall "93" Hair Tonic for a reasonable time, as directed.
We don't want you to take our word for this. We want you to test the action of Rexall "93" Hair Tonic at our risk. If you use it and it does not give you relief, just come back to us and we will immediately refund to you the money you paid for it. You promise nothing, get nothing and your mere word will be taken for it.
We are dependent upon your confidence and patronage, and we would not make these claims or make this offer if we did not believe that Rexall "93" Hair Tonic is the very best hair preparation you can use. Two sizes of bottles, 50c and $1.00.
You can buy Rexall "93" Hair Tonic in this community only at our store:

EXCELLENT SERMON BY FATHER O'BRIEN OF JOHNSTOWN, O.

On Wednesday evening Fr. O'Brien of Johnstown opened the Lenten services at St. Francis de Sales church with an excellent sermon on the Power of the Confessional. Although the weather was very inclement there was a large audience present.

Sometime in the near future he will give a discourse on the Supernatural Nature of the Confessional. These discourses are intended for non-Catholics as well as Catholics.

The pulpit of Plymouth Congregational church will be filled tomorrow by Rev. T. M. Higginbotham, a former pastor of the church, and doubtless many of the older members will be glad to greet him again. It is hoped he will be favored with large congregations.

C. W. SEWARD

FINDS HIS TERM OF SERVICE AS JUDGE OF COMMON PLEAS COURT

Hon. T. B. Fulton Will Assume Duties Monday—Judge Seward Served Eleven Years

Judge C. W. Seward's last day as Judge of the Common Pleas Court in Newark, Delaware and Key to his life was to O. K. an entry Saturday afternoon in an impromptu procession of War Veterans. Hervey, the attorney, said, "I am glad to see that the court has ended and ended the case had a short session on Monday morning.

Judge Seward has served continuously since February 2, 1902, a period of eleven years.

He had intended to leave for Florida a week from next Monday, but may be delayed by circumstances which he has no control.

His successor, T. B. Fulton of Lick and Harry Jewell of Delaware will assume them, duties Monday morning, the former having been sworn in by Clerk E. M. Larason last December and the latter by the Clerk of Delaware county.

WHERE YOU CAN HAVE CONFIDENCE

When you want medicine you want the best and you want that quick, don't you? Then the place for you is the City Drug Store. With three registered pharmacists, there are no long waits for your prescriptions to be filled and you can have the assurance that they will be compounded exactly as the doctor specifies, promptly and with the best ingredients.

These things alone would have won for the City Drug Store the immense patronage it enjoys, but in addition, this store carries the best lines of everything connected with the drug line. It carries itself on its fine line of rubber goods and sick room supplies, brushes, soaps, perfumes and toilet articles of every description.

The City Drug Store is agent for the Nyall Family Remedies and can offer the best obtainable medicinal preparations. Drop in the City Drug Store and get acquainted. Sd1

THE STOCK EXCHANGE

"The Stock Exchange From Within" is the title of a new book, just published by Bonifay, Zane & Co. The work written by Wm. C. Van Antwerp is an account of a great institution and a challenge to its critics written by a member of the stock exchange who may be presumed to understand his subject. The publisher's announcement says: "The American spirit of fair play should impel all those who are in doubt about the stock exchange to read this book, which is the first of its kind to appear in this country." The book is written in a very interesting style.

OVER 4,400 GAS WELLS IN OHIO

In Ohio 4,414 natural gas wells have been drilled since 1897, not counting the "dry holes." This is a total of 294 wells.

In 1912 Ohio consumed 112,123,229 cubic feet of gas and produced but 4,412,214 cubic feet. The difference, 107,711,015 cubic feet, was piped into Ohio from West Virginia.

The Ohio natural gas field is a strip of territory, from 5 to 50 miles wide and a few miles long. More than two millions of acres are under lease.

CURES BARBERS ITCH PROMPTLY

When All Else Fails Goodhair Soap Cures Barbers' Itch.

"I am kindly telling you a cake of Goodhair Soap, for which I am enclosing 25 cent stamps. Have been using it for some time as I have been unable to locate your store in any city. I spent about $100.00 several years ago, trying to recover 'barbers' itch.' Finally, as a last resort, I was persuaded to use your soap, which brought immediate results, at the small price thereof. I now recommend 'Goodhair' to all my friends as 'best ever' for skin diseases, but also seemed to be unable to locate your store. I gave the last cake today to a friend, one of the 'unfortunates' who could not locate your store. Yours sincerely, WILFRED MALLAHAN, 1495 Broadway, N. Y. City, Suite 27C.

"Answering your inquiry of such instant, beg leave to state that I saw the young man all right with barbers' itch, and he had been using your Goodhair Soap, and he had used anything else since commencing on the soap."

WM. C. MEYER, Lima, O. If your druggist will not send you with Goodhair Soap, write to Goodhair Remedy Co., Newark, Ohio. Sample on request.

NEW THINGS IN WALL PAPER

This Is the Second Month of Our Twenty-Second Year.

The time is right here when many people begin to THINK WALL PAPER. We began six months ago. It has taken us all this time to get ready for the demand we are already having. We buy direct from the factories, and as soon as the paper is made it is shipped straight to us. No jobber, no middleman to increase the cost. This is one reason why we are able to sell at such low prices.

Our new stock is in now, and oh, we did need it. Our old stock was never so nearly all cleaned out. Our bins were so empty it was really embarrassing. It is different now. We have the biggest, and the nicest, and the best stock of wall paper we have ever had in the twenty-one years we have been in business, and it is new and strictly up-to-date. The paper you can buy at the Edmiston Book Store for a little money will surprise you. The quality, the style, the coloring is there, and you do not have to go very deep down into your pocket for the money to buy it either. Don't fail to see our line.
